You have today received a complete tutorial in "DOG COMMUNICATION." You understand that this method of communication is an ongoing process, and for complete and lasting success you need to follow all the instructions given in the tutorial.

During the consultation should you feel you are not able to follow the teaching there will be no charge for the consultation.

Should you need any further instructions or help you can phone (your name) at (your company name) during normal working hours on (your telephone number) for a verbal consultation or advice, for three months from the date of the consultation, free of charge. Should a message be left on the answering service, calls are happily returned to a land line telephone.

You understand this is a way of life and for continued success it is up to you to convince your dog(s), with the knowledge provided, that without a question of doubt you are the leaders of the pack.

You understand that all advice and guidance is provided in good faith and that in the unlikely event of any incident, accident or damage caused to or by your dog(s) under any circumstance either during or after the consultation, no liability will be attached to (your name) or (your company name).
